—The opinion of Judge McCarty, in the case of Thomas vs. the Brownville, Port Kearney and Pacific railway, has been received by the clerk of the United States court. The judge dismisses the bill of the plaintiff for the reason that two officers of the company were admitted into the construction company, which was organized for the purpose of finishing the road. The contract is held to be illegal and contrary to public policy.
—A story comes to us of a case of seduction and desertion which occurred in this vicinity within the past few days. The details are not of general interest, but the substance of the story is that a young fellow came to town two or three weeks ago and went to work in a well-known barber shop. A young and foolish girl from the country worked there the fellow boarded, and soon became the recipient of his marked attentions. She was warned of his character, but to no avail, and on Sunday he persuaded her to go with him to Council Bluffs, where on Tuesday he deserted her, leaving her, as we understand, wholly destitute.

BENNETT'S BREAK.

An Aged Land Seeker Finds Something in Omaha that He did not Seek.

And Becomes an Easy Prey to Designing Villains.

Deceived, Drugged, Robbed and Wedded.

A peculiar freak of the class known as confidence operators was developed in this city in the past twenty-four hours. The wily thief is usually satisfied with getting away with the possessions of his victim, but in this instance a new departure was made, the effect of which can not be at present easily foreseen.

Wednesday morning Mr. William Bennett, an honest-looking citizen of Saginaw, Mich., came over the Rock Island road with a friend who resides at Central City, this state. Mr. Bennett came to look up land suitable for farming purposes, to buy if suited and to be followed, if his trip was satisfactory, by a large number of settlers. He had a letter from the agent of the U. P. land department at Chicago to Mr. Leavitt Burnham, stating the above facts and recommending him to the courtesies of the department officials.

At this point Mr. Bennett's limited ticket ran out and he went up to the headquarters to get it renewed and make arrangements for stopping over between this point and Kearney, which was his destination. He obtained the necessary orders and was to have left with his friend at noon but missed the train by a moment only. He was much disappointed and going to one of the railway officials' alludes to the fact that he was left alone here, and tapping his leg indicated that he had $500 concealed in his boot. He was warned not to come up town as it was dangerous, but notwithstanding this slipped off, and on his return, said he had deposited $3,000 in one of the banks, but still had some left. He again came up town and did not return to take the evening train nor yet yesterday's, so that the officials were getting very anxious for his safety.

Now for his experience after leaving the depot and up to yesterday. He says that he fell in with another land man (B) and that the two started up town together. The latter remarked that he must be tired from his long ride and offered to stand treat. They went into a saloon on Tenth street and Mr. Bennett called for wine. His friend insisted that his weary condition demanded something stronger; so in compliance with his solicitations he took brandy.

What happened after that the beguiled man did not know until he found himself in a hack being rapidly driven—he knew not whither. At length the hack stopped and he was assisted to alight. He was taken into a house, and there he believes he went through some sort of ceremony, the nature of which is best revealed by the following certificate:

"Omaha, June 30, 1890.—This is to certify that Wm. Bennett and Lena Wilkins were by William Crawford, 'Squire.' This certificate was found subsequently in Mr. B.'s possession. Again the veil of oblivion clouds the mind of the victim for a period, but shortly after midnight last night Officer Dahlstrom found the land prospector lying on the sidewalk, near Hamilton's bank, and took him to the lock-up. On being assigned before Judge Hawes yesterday, he was committed for three days for intoxication. He afterwards told his story to a BEE reporter, and subsequently to an officer, and believing that he might identify the saloon where the drink was taken, or the scene of his nuptial ceremonies, he was sent out with a policeman on a still hunt. They are probably still hunting.

Among the papers taken from him at the jail were, a cancelled note to parties in St. Louis, Mich., the letter and certificate above described, an empty whisky bottle, several maps, etc. His ticket was missing, but is safe in the possession of Mr. B. Hansen of the land department, who will try to assist the unlucky man all he can. He thinks he has deposited a large amount of money at one of the banks, or if not that he has been robbed of a considerable sum.

Mr. Bennett stated yesterday that his loss did not exceed $75, but his talk was all that of one in a dream and not coherent. He was no doubt still under the influence of the drug given him. He does not know whether his marriage is a legitimate or not, but he may hope it is the best, as no such J. P. as Crawford is known here. No effort will be spared to right his wrongs as far as possible.

Bogardus Stars and Rockets for Shot Guns at Max Meyer & Co.'s.
—The nine o'clock train in on the C. R. L. & P. yesterday came in two sections, one consisting of five sleepers, a dining-car and two coaches and carrying nearly 300 passengers composing "Rollins's Royal Excursion" to California and return. The party was made up of officers and people from Indiana, Ohio, Kentucky, Canada and elsewhere. The fare is $125 for the round trip, and the tickets are good for ninety days, with a stop-over at any point and half-rate points of call. At the transfer the party was put on a train of nine sleepers and one baggage car, and ran out at 12:15 p. m. as the first section of train No. 3, the second section taking the mail, baggage and express cars and day coaches only. A party of sharpers were after the travelers right off, and at the bluff, made one or two little hauls. At this strict order were given to admit none to the cars but passengers with tickets.

THE COMING MEN.

Rise and Progress of the Student Life at Crichton University.

Gratifying Exhibit of the Last Year's Work.

The second annual commencement exercises of Crichton University were held Wednesday. The large auditorium was crowded with prominent ladies and gentlemen, the friends of education and the patrons of the institution.

The hall was beautifully decorated for the occasion. Back of and over the stage, surrounded by flowers and evergreens, were life-size paintings of the founders of the university, the late Mr. and Mrs. Edward Crichton. Between these, embedded in a bank of flowers and wreaths of evergreens, was a portrait of Charles Crichton, their only son, who with them slumbers on the hillside at Holy Sepulchre cemetery—gone, but not forgotten. Vases of flowers on brackets, flanked by numerous flags, filled the remainder of the recess, the whole forming a fitting background to the mental flowers that bloomed upon the stage and shed their intellectual fragrance on the audience.

There were fathers and mothers present, brothers and sisters, and pin-point relatives, whose faces were a succession of smiles as their nearest kin bravely marched upon the stage, displayed his mental calibre, and retired amid the unstinted plaudits of the audience. The universal bouquet, with its common sense, was there, to soothe the upper story of the favored boy and fill with joy his ever the less fortunate one. It was an evening of happiness for all, particularly so for the faculty, whose untiring labors were crowned with brilliant success. Master Frank Chaswood delivered the introductory address, in which he welcomed the audience to the commencement exercises, and reviewed the results of the year's study.

A quartette of boys, consisting of Master John McCarty, A. Buckley, Chas. Sullivan and Frank McCarty, then sang "Day again is brightly breaking," with harmonious effect. A dialogue "Specimens for the Fair," by Masters Fred. McClure, Arthur Crichton, Philip Williams, Peter Casey, James Miller and R. B. McDonagh, came next. The idea of the dialogue was that several boys had written articles for competition at the State fair, and they were submitted to their friends for an expression of opinion as to their merit. "Boys," "The American Boy in Particular," "Boys' Troubles," "Omaha, Past and Present," "Honesty the Best Policy," were among the subjects treated, and many amusing criticisms to all of these works were advanced.

Master Robbie McDonagh, a chip of the old block, delivered a parody on "Excelsior," concerning the Holly water-pipes.

Mr. Caldwell Hamilton discoursed upon the subject of education, which he handled in a creditable manner, pointing out in glowing language the advantages of a good education, and the necessity of its possession by every man, whatever his station in life. He said it was a mistaken idea that our greatest men were without an education. Some might have risen to eminence without it, but they themselves felt the need of it, and warned others against neglecting the culture of their minds. At the close of the delivery he was made the recipient of several handsome bouquets.

A dialogue by Masters William Shields, Harry Burkley, Joseph McKillip, Philip Mergen, John McCarty and Cornelius Sullivan, upon "Advanced Ideas," followed. The substance of the discussion was original with the boys, and consisted in expressions of opinion as to what the modern college should teach, one speaking in favor of muscular training, another for a business education, a third for the extirpation of the classics, a fourth for a musical course, etc. The arguments were all well presented and highly entertaining.

Mr. Constantine Smyth closed the exercises with a careful analysis of the future of Nebraska. His closing words were: "Ours is the next state on which the star of empire must shine as it moves on in its westward course. * * * While she goes forward to take the place destined by nature for her, let her ever be ready to extend a protecting hand over religion and christian education, without which no state can be rich or powerful."

At the close of the literary exercises, Bishop O'Connor presented the medals awarded to the scholars, as follows:
The medal for excellence in the class of second humanities was awarded to Master Cornelius Sullivan; in the class of third humanities to Master William Shields; in the class of first grammar to Master Frank McCarty; in that of second grammar, division A, to Master Robert McDonagh; same class, division B, to Master Philip Williams, and division C, to Master O. Chubbuck. In the class of rudiments, division A, the medal was awarded to Master Henry La Chapelle; and in the same class, division B, to Master Charles Furey.
The Crichton medal, for the best Latin scholar, to Master Harry Burkley.
The McShane medal, for the best student in book-keeping, to Master Philip Mergen.
The McCarty medal for the best English composition, to Cornelius Sullivan.
The Furey medal, for the best reader, to Master Louis Quinn.
Hoffman's orchestra executed several selections in quite a brilliant style during the interludes.
Bishop O'Connor closed the exercises with a few brief and appropriate remarks.

THE CENSUS.

Omaha Holds Her Own With Other Western Cities.

The statistics of the United States census, given yesterday, place Omaha in the front rank of the cities of the Missouri valley. Only Kansas City and St. Joseph have a larger population, and Omaha presses very closely on the heels of St. Joseph.
The result shows that estimates made by competent judges, of the probable showing Omaha would make alongside of other western cities, have been verified in a remarkable manner. It also serves as a rebuke to those who took occasion to accuse the enumerators of negligence in performing their duties, as their work speaks for itself. These officials have spared neither time nor pains to serve their city and deserve one and all, the unqualified thanks of the public generally.

OVER THE RIVER.
Council Bluffs has strained every nerve to raise her census to the highest possible figures, and it is rumored she has initiated Cheyenne in taking down all the emigrants passing through and enumerating the silent inhabitants of the cemeteries. The Nonpareil of yesterday says: "See that the census enumerators do not miss you. See to it that each and every citizen aids the census boom. The more names the better they are still at work."

THE CONSUMED EXPLAINED.
Mayor Chase having written The Chicago Tribune for its authority for the statement that "while the state of Nebraska would increase in population over 300 per cent the past four years, the city had but 1600 more residents than at the last census," the following reply was received by him to day:

THE TRIBUNE, Chicago, June 29, 1890.

Hon. C. S. Chase, Mayor of Omaha.
SIR—In answer to your inquiry of the 24th inst., I would say that the paragraph referred to in The Tribune is an extract from an interview with Senator Paddock, printed in an eastern paper. By a misprint the senator was made to say that the increase in the population of Omaha was 1,600, whereas he did say according to the report, that it was 16,000. I am, Very respectfully yours,
R. W. PATTERSON,
Assistant Editor.

THE MURKY MISSOURI.

It Invades the Lower Portion Of the City.

For several days past the river has been rapidly rising, and at noon yesterday it had attained a height of 16 ft. 7 in.
The bottom lands between Farnham and the river and the U. P. bridge are already partially under water, and the track which runs close to the bank at the foot of Farnham street is submerged in some places.
The water is within a few inches of the floor of the smelting works, and should it rise much higher, the works will be compelled to shut down until the water subsides.
The road to the old ferry is also under water, and a portion of Farnham street just west of the U. P. track is barely passable.
The river was rising slowly at Sioux City Wednesday, and is reported by the Niobrara rising at Yankton and falling at Pierre. The river will fall slightly previous to the coming of the mountain rise, now on the way down.

KINDLING THE FIRES.

Amid Blaze of Bonfires, Boom of Cannon, Bare of Trumpets, and Blowing Off of "Bazoon."

The Great Presidential Campaign of 1880 Unshowered In.

Thousands of Patriots, Republicans and Democrats, Assembled,

To Hear the Discussion of the Vital Issues of the Day.

A Ring of True Republicanism with the Baser Metals.

Time and place are great things. This was never more self evident than in the gathering assembled at the corner of Farnham and Fourteenth street last evening, on the occasion of the ratification of the Cincinnati convention. On the eve of a great presidential campaign, with the leaders of both parties in the field and the parties themselves girding on their armor preparatory to engaging in a gigantic contest for political supremacy, it would be strange if the first gun would not send the blood pulsating through the veins of

FRIND AND FOR ALIKE.
In the heart of a great, popular and prosperous city, on a mid-summer evening and at a spot forever memorable and sacred to every citizen, it would be remarkable if a common impulse would not bring to that spot every one in whom a spark of patriotism burned, the sound of martial music, the firing of guns and the sight of innumerable messengers of fire clearing the sky, combined to arouse the ardor of the susceptible hearts of the American citizen.

These things then drew to the spot named, a concourse numbering perhaps 3000 people, of whom one-half, if not more, were republicans dyed in the wool. On the southeast corner of the old Grand Central hotel site a stand had been erected for the use of the democrats during the coming campaign. Elevated high above the crowd, it was fringed with flags, with a background of the national colors, the same glowing, white and blue entwining the sails and floating from a staff erected on one corner. Upon this stand were seated the most prominent democrats of this city and county with visitors from abroad, all

BURNING GIANTS ready to engage in the strife. Several national airs having been played by the Union Pacific band, whose services were called into requisition for the occasion, several rounds having been fired with a brace of anvils, located on Fifteenth street, and innumerable sky rockets and Roman candles having added a dazzling though momentary splendor over the scene, Hon. Charles Brown, chairman of the democratic county central committee, advanced to the front of the platform and announced that an organization would be necessary before proceeding with the regular program for the evening. He thereupon nominated Judge Wakeley as chairman of the meeting, and that gentleman was loudly cheered by the crowd. Hon. W. H. Jjama was chosen secretary in a similar manner, after which a list of 250 prominent democrats of the city and county were elected vice-presidents and invited to seats on the ground stand. Judge Wakeley was then introduced, and after several ineffectual attempts to address the crowd gave way to the reception of a large delegation from the First ward, which headed by a band of music and
